

Dr. Jack L. Wright is Welcomed to Staff

Blue Ridge Hospice is pleased to announce the addition of Jack L.

Wright, MD to its medical staff. Dr. Wright will conduct home visits to patients enrolled in the Blue Ridge Hospice program in the Winchester, Kernstown, and Clarke County portions of its service area. The locally based, not-for profit Blue Ridge Hospice serves an eight-county area of the Shenandoah Valley and the Piedmont region, and the city of Winchester.

Board-certified in Family Practice and Hospice and Palliative Care medicine, Dr. Wright practiced in Harrisonburg for 17 years prior to joining Blue Ridge Hospice. He is a member of the Academy of Hospice and Palliative Care and the Academy of Family Practice. Dr. Wright is also the former medical director of a hospice in Harrisonburg.

Noting the Blue Ridge Hospice Board of Directors' pleasure in welcoming Dr. Wright to the staff, President and CEO Ernie Carnevale commented, "Dr. Wright's medical experience, his interest in family medicine, and particularly end-of-life care, brings much benefit to the services and programs we provide our patients."

A native of Roanoke, Dr. Wright grew up in the Virginia Beach area and attended medical school at the University of Virginia. He conducted his medical training and residency in the Army, later working in Harrisonburg in private practice for six years, followed by 11 years in a group practice.

He and his wife, Aleris, have two children, Lenora and Matthew.

Hospice Employees 'Give Back' Through Volunteering

With more than 500 volunteers at Blue Ridge Hospice serving as their inspiration, hospice staff members often reciprocate by volunteering their time to community service.

In appreciation for these acts of caring and to help foster more "giving back" to the community, Blue Ridge Hospice has established the Employee Paid Volunteer Leave program. Full-time employees are allowed up to 40 hours of paid leave each calendar year to perform volunteer community service for agencies other than Blue Ridge Hospice.

"I'm encouraged and grateful we are able to provide this special benefit to our staff," stated hospice President and CEO Ernie Carnevale. "Giving back to our community is one way we thank and honor all those who volunteer their time and talents at Blue Ridge Hospice."

With efforts ranging from mission trips within the United States and overseas to neighborhood revitalization projects, staff members have performed over 500 hours of volunteer service over the past two years. The following vignettes are two examples.

Leisa Newland had a history of volunteering long before the Employee Paid Volunteer Leave policy was put into effect. Leisa is Manager of Compliance and Patient Information. For the past seven years, she has volunteered a week of her time to the Royal Family Kids Camps program coordinated through her church, the Winchester Church of God.

The program features one-week camps across the world to provide abused and neglected children, ages 7 to 11, opportunities to gather with their peers and have fun during a week of therapeutic activities in a safe environment. Counselors and volunteers organize healthy and healing activities for the campers including crafts, fishing, canoeing, chapel/worship time, and music.

Next year Leisa and her husband, Kevin, face new challenges (and opportunities) and a new level of volunteerism when they become co-directors of the camp program at their church. (continued p.3, see Leave)

Mission Statement

To make quality end-of-life care available to individuals and families facing serious illness and to support anyone in our community affected by death, dying, and loss.

We are very sensitive to privacy concerns. We do not sell or rent names or addresses of our supporters to any other person, company, or organization.

Correspondence from Capital Hospice and Hospice Education Institute is not affiliated with Blue Ridge Hospice.

NOTE FROM ERNIE

Autumn is here and I always look forward to this exciting time of year as I travel across the Blue Ridge Mountains and into the Shenandoah Valley.

As you read through our quarterly newsletter you will find it filled with many exciting events. We are pleased to welcome Dr. Jack Wright, our newest hospice physician and member of our palliative medicine team. Dr. Wright moved here from Harrisonburg bringing with him his delightful wife and years of hospice experience. Blue Ridge Hospice is very fortunate to have him join our two other talented physicians, Drs. Ha and Milligan, who continue to provide excellent care to all our patients and their families.

I hope you have a chance to read about the many hospice employees who are giving back to our communities through their individual volunteer efforts. Blue Ridge Hospice is blessed to have over 500 volunteers who give to us every day, and we are glad we are able to support our employees in their volunteer efforts.

Speaking of volunteer efforts, we are so fortunate to be this year's recipient of the 3rd Running of the Blue Ridge Fall Races. Under the shared chairmanship of Melanie Marks and Michael Hoffman, Blue Ridge Hospice will receive over $50,000 as a result of their hard work, and the support of many businesses and individuals in our community. Special thanks to race committee members Ben Farnstrom, Stacey Hough, Jan Kerns, Sheila McKee, Linda Roberts, Noel Wright, Anthony Crosen, Cheryl Ringer, and Lisa Wilt.

Lastly, regarding healthcare reform, I am ever hopeful that hospice services will continue to be viewed as a quality, cost-effective, and efficient healthcare service. Since we already depend on community support and donations to offset the limited reimbursement we receive for our patients, any further cuts to the Medicare Hospice Benefit will greatly affect how we deliver our hospice care to the 200 patients we serve each and every day. Stay tuned and stay involved as many of you have.

I wish everyone a pleasant fall season.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PLANNED GIFTS COMMITTEE

Charitable Donations Benefit Donors, Too

In past newsletters, the Blue Ridge Hospice Planned Giving Committee has described a number of gifting strategies that can be used to support Blue Ridge Hospice—and can offer donors financial benefits. Some of the benefits to donors can include tax deductions, income from a non-income producing asset, and the satisfaction of knowing Blue Ridge Hospice is helped to provide end-of-life care services.

Many investors make cash contributions to support charitable organizations like Blue Ridge Hospice. While cash can be the easiest asset to donate, there are alternatives that offer additional advantages to donors. Donating highly appreciated assets, like a stock or real property, can help an investor avoid paying capital gains tax that would normally be incurred upon the sale of the asset.

Suppose, for example, Jane invested $5,000 in a technology company in 1994, and the security is now worth $25,000. If she were to sell the stock and donate the proceeds to Blue Ridge Hospice, she would pay $3,000 (assuming a 15% capital gains tax) of long-term capital gains tax on the $20,000 of appreciation, reducing her donation to $22,000. But if she instead donated the shares directly to Blue Ridge Hospice, hospice would receive the full $25,000 and Jane could deduct the entire donation on her tax return and avoid paying capital gains tax.

Another charitable gifting strategy is to name hospice as a beneficiary of a retirement plan, annuity, or life insurance policy. This simple step allows those assets to pass directly to the named beneficiary (a charity, relative, or combination), and not by the directives of a will or trust. By naming a qualifying organization, like hospice, as a beneficiary of a retirement plan, annuity, or life insurance policy, the assets avoid probate and provide a deduction for estate tax purposes. This strategy is easy to implement and allows you to maintain control and use of the assets during your lifetime. After your lifetime, the assets are passed to designated beneficiaries which can include a charity like Blue Ridge Hospice.

Some investors have experienced a decrease in dividend income as companies have reduced or eliminated their dividend payments. There are also stocks that have never paid dividends. In these instances, charitably-inclined investors who would like to receive a stream of income over a lifetime, might find a charitable remainder trust to be a useful strategy.

In a charitable remainder trust, an asset (stock, bond, etc.) is gifted to the trust and subsequently sold in the trust.

Capital gains tax can be avoided and the donation can be claimed as a tax deduction. Moreover, the donor receives income from the trust over his or her lifetime (or the lifetime of another designated non-charitable beneficiary or for a specified period of up to 20 years). At the end of the term of the trust, the assets in the trust are paid to the charity such as Blue Ridge Hospice. Because a charitable remainder trust is a complex strategy involving careful planning and execution, it is a strategy often better suited for sizable donations.

A charitable lead trust can offer a philanthropist a means of seeing his or her generosity put to use first hand. The income from an asset donated to the trust can be directed to a charitable entity by the investor for a specific period of time (lifetime or a number of years). The charity receives immediate benefit and the donor is able to watch his or her donated funds at work. After the period of time specified in the trust, the asset passes to the designated beneficiaries.

Everyone's situation is different and so are the benefits, implications, and complexities of the gifting strategies discussed in this article. Please don't hesitate to utilize Anthony Crosen, Vice President of Development, and the Planned Giving Committee as resources to discuss a potential planned gift. For additional information, please call us at 540-536-5210.

Gift strategies can include donating highly appreciated assets, naming a charity as an annuity or insurance beneficiary, and establishing charitable remainder or charitable lead trusts.

Leisa says the Employee Paid Volunteer Leave policy makes it financially feasible for her to volunteer time to the camp each year. "I'm able to participate in a worthy cause without the pressure of taking leave without pay," she said. "Volunteering is such a rewarding experience. With the many volunteers who dedicate their time to Blue Ridge Hospice, it's nice to give something back."

Esther Wren, LPN, Referral Coordinator for Blue Ridge Hospice, just completed her 18th year of volunteering a very special service to Bob Wortman of Fairfax. Bob is a 53-year-old, mentally-challenged individual who lives with his mother. Esther met Bob and his mother while caring for Bob's father at Fairfax Nursing Center.

She learned from Bob's mother of his desire to take a trip to King's Dominion theme park near Richmond and the difficulty in finding someone to take him.

Esther enthusiastically stepped up to the plate and made the trip an annual tradition. Although Bob only participates in three of the rides, highlights of his day include "people watching" (with an emphasis on girl-watching), eating pizza and french fries, and watching the park light up at night.

"To see the joy in his face makes the trip so worthwhile," remarked Esther.

Although Esther says she would continue with this tradition no matter what, she admits that being compensated for taking time from a busy work schedule gives her new peace of mind.

Three Rs Promoted at Thrift Shop

“Shop Cheap, Shop Green” was the idea behind a recent collaborative event by Green Shenandoah, the Spiritual Life Team of Shenandoah University, and the Blue Ridge Hospice Thrift Shop in Winchester.

On August 25 the thrift shop played host to more than 70 student shoppers and volunteers for a special after-hours shopping party. In light of the economic downturn, Shenandoah University organized the event in hopes of establishing a campus culture that embraces the notion that sometimes used is better than new, simple is the new chic, and frugal is smarter than frivolous.

Raising over $700, the evening of bargain shopping and environmental awareness proved beneficial to all. “It’s good to partner with the university and the students. It adds value to both institutions. It brings awareness to reduce, reuse, and recycle,” said Blue Ridge Hospice regional thrift store manager, Jacki Mumm.

“Shop Cheap, Shop Green was an overwhelming success,” said Stacey Keenan, Sustainability Coordinator and Coordinator of Outdoor Recreational Programming for the university. “Not only did students find some amazing deals on clothes and items for their residences, they did so in a sustainable way, all the while supporting Blue Ridge Hospice.”

Blue Ridge Hospice, like other agencies in the area, has also implemented several recycling policies in support of the world-wide “going green” initiative. Each month, Blue Ridge Hospice Thrift Shop staffers package and recycle 80,000 pounds of clothing they cannot sell, as well as metals like brass and copper, from its five thrift shops. Purchases of these items by a recycling agent provide additional revenue for hospice.

“One of the purposes of the event was to reiterate how the three Rs—reduce, reuse, and recycle—can be applied to shopping. By supporting a thrift store, students reduce the amount of resources used to manufacture new things, reuse what someone else no longer wants, and aid in recycling because Blue Ridge Hospice recycles what can’t be sold,” said Keenan.

“In May, we’ll sponsor a Green Move-Out. Students can donate things they aren’t taking with them as they leave campus, and we’ll complete the circle,” concluded Keenan.

The staff of Blue Ridge Hospice looks forward to partnering with Shenandoah University on future events that enhance the quality of life in our community. (Shenandoah University’s The Sun contributed to this article.)

Thrift Shop Attire Featured at Fashion Show

In the Shenandoah Valley version of the catwalks of New York, Blue Ridge Hospice staff and volunteers graced the stage in highly fashionable, yet affordable, ensembles coordinated from the five Blue Ridge Hospice thrift shops.

This community fashion show served as the focus of the Christian Women’s Connection Luncheon held at The Holiday Inn & Suites Front Royal on September 10.

Following the show, guests had the opportunity to browse racks of clothing for sale. The purchases at this collaborative community event raised over $200 for Blue Ridge Hospice.

Shopping Extravaganza Benefits Hospice

“Brightening Life’s Journey With A Little Sparkle” was the theme of a pre-holiday shopping extravaganza in Leesburg in support of Blue Ridge Hospice.

October 2 proved a unique buying opportunity when the Consignment Boutique and talented Loudoun jewelry designer, Andrea Gaines, hosted a special evening featuring lovely designs of hand-crafted turquoise and semi-precious stones in intricate earrings, necklaces, and bracelets and the upscale women’s apparel and accessories that make Consignment Boutique a popular shopping destination.

“We were pleased to host this special event in honor of Blue Ridge Hospice,” noted Marilyn Naylor, who with partner Sheila Ralph, owns the Consignment Boutique. Both Naylor and Ralph serve on the Blue Ridge Hospice Loudoun/Clarke Advisory Board.

“In addition to bringing friends together for an evening of fun and shopping, we were able to introduce even more people to the wonderful services and programs Blue Ridge Hospice provides to Loudoun County and area residents,” said Ralph.

Children with Losses Comforted at Fourth Annual Camp Hope

What do you get when you mix a playful seven-foot cow, water balloons, four furry dogs, and Tae Kwon Do? Blue Ridge Hospice Camp Hope, of course!

For the fourth year, Camp Hope provided a day of education and fun in a safe and supportive environment to children who experienced the loss of loved ones. Over 30 children between the ages of five and 15 participated in two camp sessions. The sessions were offered during the summer at no cost to area children. Participants enjoyed kid-friendly activities designed to help process feelings of loss and grief. Many of the campers made new friends while learning they are not alone in their experiences.

Highlights included visits from Maya, Buddy, Luna, and Chelsea, certified therapy dogs who enjoyed lots of hugs and perhaps a few too many treats. After sessions of painting, creating memory boxes, singing, and storytelling, the children enjoyed outdoor activities that included a refreshing water balloon toss.

The Chick-fil-A Cow made a surprise visit at lunch time and was an instant hit, playing hoops and hide-and-seek before posing for a picture or two.

Master Lim of the U.S. Martial Arts Academy featured his young disciplined group of martial arts experts to demonstrate their keen skills and abilities. Each camper was given the opportunity to learn a few Tae Kwon Do moves and practice kicking the blues away—providing a perfect ending to a full and enjoyable day.

For more information on Camp Hope, the Camp Hope Reunion scheduled for October 30, or other free Blue Ridge Hospice children's events, contact Cathy Wolniewicz at 540-536-1064.

Memorial Garden Revitalized

The Lebanon Church 4-H Club of Shenandoah County recently adopted the Blue Ridge Hospice Memorial Garden in Woodstock as one of its community service projects.

4-H'ers removed old limbs, pruned, planted flowers, and cleaned and redisplayed "Memory Rocks" that had been placed in memory or honor of past and current patients of Blue Ridge Hospice.

4-H is a youth organization committed to promoting leadership, citizenship, and personal growth for young people around the world.

These enthusiastic, caring young folks learned what hospice is and what they can do to help people who have lost someone special in their lives.

It was a wonderful growth experience for those involved, and an opportunity to "remember, honor, and celebrate" the lives of loved ones lost.

'What an Incredible Event!'

Third Annual Steeplechase Races Bring In Over $50,000

Thanks to the hard work and generous contributions of many supporters of Blue Ridge Hospice, the Third Running of the Blue Ridge Fall Races at Woodley Farm in Clarke County proved the most successful yet.

The races on the beautiful fall weekend of September 18 and 19 netted more than $50,000 for Blue Ridge Hospice. For that, we are especially thankful for the outstanding efforts of the organizing committee, the leadership of race co-chairs Melanie Marks and Michael E. Hoffman, and the generosity of Woodley Farm owners Merry Carol and Herb Jonkers.

"We are absolutely thrilled with the community's outpouring of support for our hospice," said President and CEO Ernie Carnevale, adding the result was even more significant due to the state of the economy.

The race weekend was launched on the evening of September 18 at the Calcutta dinner/dance/auction. A crowd of some 300 guests gathered to enjoy a buffet meal and to bid on sporting art pieces by local artists Linda Volrath and Gail Guirrerri-Maslyk and an exquisite necklace donated by Hunt Country Jewelers.

Guests also enjoyed a dove shoot and chili supper provided by race supporter Richard Smith and his wife, Kelly. Mike Smith of Valley Proteins, a corporate supporter of the event, left with the majority of the artwork after winning the highest bids.

Race day attracted a large crowd that enjoyed picnics at corporate tents and tailgates while watching the flat, hurdle, and timber races on Woodley Farm's unparalleled course for viewing the action. Longtime race announcer Will O'Keefe provided a lively running commentary on each race.

Blue Ridge Hospice employees attended their annual employee picnic this year at the races where they enjoyed ample fare, the races, and the event's other attractions. These included Vendor Row, where gifts, hats, boots, jewelry, and equestrian items were on sale, and displays by local non-profit groups. Nearby, children's activities included stick pony races, face painting, inflatables, and pony rides.

"What an incredible event for Blue Ridge Hospice!" proclaimed one race-goer.

Blue Ridge Hospice is very grateful to those businesses and individuals who make this event possible. For the third year running, Valley Equine Associates, PLLC participated as the major event partner. Other partners included Banbury Cross Farm, Batterton Horse Enterprises & Milton Valley Farm, Bill & Judy Hahn, Boehringer Ingelheim, Centennial Broadcasting, Equine Medical Services, Fort Dodge, Foxboro Farm, Fran & Lisa Kysela, Harrison Equine, Haygain, Hindon Hill Farm, JD Matthews, Kelly Insurance, Lakeville Farm, Linda J. Armbrust, MFH and Wayne Armbrust, Lodge Construction, Omega Drywall, Ltd., Pennfield, Pioneer Seed, REACH, Reading Landscapes, Inc., Snickersville Hounds, Sodexo, Summit Community Bank, The Bennett Insurance Agency, Trex Company, TV3, Valley Health, Valley Proteins, Wachovia, Wells Fargo, White Glove Farms, Winchester Emergency Physicians, PC, Winchester Printers, Wiseman & Associates, Woodley Farm, and Wunderlich Securities.

Butterfly Club Members Enjoy Social Events

The Butterfly Club of Blue Ridge Hospice has enjoyed a successful year.

After welcoming new Annual Gifts Committee member, Liz Costello, in May, the club kicked off its annual activities with a Butterfly Cocktail Party at V2 in Old Town Winchester. Club members were encouraged to bring friends and learn about the many programs of Blue Ridge Hospice. The event also served as a much-deserved thank you to members and participants were treated to a lovely array of hors d'oeuvres and great company.

In late June, the club held its Second Annual Butterfly Social at Historic Jordan Springs in Stephenson. Current and prospective club members enjoyed a lovely evening of light fare and brief tours of the venue.

"Butterfly House Parties" were introduced as a new concept this year by the Annual Gifts Committee. Committee members are encouraged to host small parties in a personal setting, inviting a small group of colleagues, friends, and family with the intent of promoting the club's motto, Where Small Gifts Can Do Amazing Things.

In honor of Cinco de Mayo, Club Chair Jeanne Mezzatesta hosted the first house party in May, followed by club member Liz Costello with a September Soirée. In late October, the club will celebrate the folly and fun of Halloween at the home of member Tina Stowell.

To date, The Butterfly Club of Blue Ridge Hospice has enrolled 180 members, and is enthusiastically recruiting more participation from the greater community.

If you or someone you know is interested in learning more about this unique giving opportunity, please contact Anthony Crosen at 540-536-5210.

Watch for announcements about upcoming club events, and please consider joining this special group of charitable givers and supporters of Blue Ridge Hospice.

Thank You to these Support Groups!
